TANGIER, Jan. 5.-Sultan Muley Abdul Aziz finding his task al most impossible after twelve years of irresponsible, lazy and cruel rule of the Moors, is said to be on the point of abdicating in favor of his brother who is a favorite with the people.

The rebellion in Moroco is partly the result of the interference of Stmr. Hawaii, Nelson, for windward foreigners who have told some of the tribal leaders of a different civilization than the Moors enjoy under the present Oriental despotism of a quasi-hereditary monarchy. In this way the reformers sprung They rebel against the arbitrary systems of courts, tax collecting, and general policy that is causing the commerce of the nation to be Schr. Chas. The Sultan put down the Riffian rebellion of 1898 by. with a massacre and later treated the prisoners taken with the greatest possible cruelty.

DIPLOMATIC CHANGES.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 5 .- Dr. David Jayne Hill, who was appointed First Assistant Secretary of State by the late President McKinley, has been appointed Minister to Switzerland in place of Charles Page Bryan who has been appointed Minister to Portugal.

Dr. Hill recently took a prominent part in the entertainment of Prince Henry during his visit in America. He was formerly president of Rochester University, is a scholarly man, and is noted for his knowledge of international law. In the past he has taken a prominent part in New York politics. President McKinley gave him the appointment in the State Department on the resignation of John Bassett Moore in 1898.

Minister Bryan served four years as Minister to Brazil, and previously to that had been appointed Minister to China.

PANIC CHECKED, REBELS BEATEN.

EUSTIS AS A PROPHET.

"I want to make a prediction. I'm not much of a prophet, but I will prediet that when you dedicate your new public building, that you will receive a message from the President of Mars, a message from the governor of Jupiter and one from the mayor of Saturn. (Laughter and applause.) Why, it was only twenty-five years before Captain Cook landed on these Islands that Ben-Jamin Franklyn was out with a kite and a key tied to the string trying to fetch something from the storm clouds. He waited and waited, and finally a shiver came down the line like the raising of the hair on a cat's back. He says, 'She is coming,' and she came. I remember in my life of going to the remember in my life of going to the funeral of Morse, the great inventor, and today you have the fruits of Mackay, the enterprising man, the man of action. Today you see the cars on the streets roll by with electricity propelling them; you talk thousands of miles on wires. you have the sands of miles on wires; you have the X-rays and can read a man's thoughts, and the girls can see his heart beat. (Laughter.)

"I want to express my thanks to the business men of Honolulu. They are stay. I don't know where else you can find business men so full of enterprise. I went to your theatre the other evening and saw a production by local talent, and it was surprisingly good. And so it is in all things here—you have to rely upon yourselves and it develops a high type of manhood and womanhood The beautiful women of Honolulu, God Your business men and they have made my task easy. Why, I have stood on your street corners perhaps half of my

FAMOUS FLAG RAISED.

The big, handsome thirty-foot United States flag which floated over the capi-tol building yesterday in honor of the has become famous in American-Ha-waiian history. It was the flag which was raised with so much ceremony on Flag Raising Day, August 12, 1898, when the Hawaiian Islands were formally taken over by the United States by Admiral Miller, U. S. N. just after the Hawaiian standard had been lowered from the same staff. Last evening at sunset a national salute was fired by the Capitol battery in its honor when it was lowered for the day.

THE FIREWORKS DISPLAY.

grounds last evening attracted thou-sands of people there who filled the space about the stand. The detonation of the mortars, with the resulting expyrotechnics for more than an hour. The report from the mortars at times was deafening, but it was all music to the sight-seers. Choruses of "Ahs" followed each ascending and exploding piece. Wriggling snakes, showers of sparks, fire balloons and rockets formed a pleasing sky picture. One bomb exploded in the trees, but no one was hurt.
